For the previous month, additional 51 communities, by having combined their resources, began to address matters that are important for the development of territories. Hence, at present, more than 860 communities have been jointly implementing 199 agreements in the areas of solid waste management, water supply and sanitation, security, social, administrative services, etc.

Draft Law on New Principles of Administrative-Territorial System of Ukraine has been Prepared for Parliamentary Voting

On 11 July 2018, the Parliamentary Committee on State-Building, Regional Policy and Local Self-Government recommended that the Verkhovna Rada adopt draft law "On Principles of Administrative-Territorial System of Ukraine" in the first reading.

The draft law determines, within the framework of the applicable Constitution, principles on which the administrative-territorial system of Ukraine should be based but it does not change it.

In particular, the draft law defines the administrative-territorial system, administrative-territorial entities and levels thereof, population centres and categories thereof, determines the procedure for establishment, liquidation, setting and changing boundaries, of administrative-territorial entities and population centres, etc.

The draft law specifies, in particular, that the system of administrative-territorial entities shall remain to be a three-level one. In this connection, it is stipulated that the Rayon (District) level should be arranged in a better way so to be in line with the European standards.

In addition, the draft law determines more precisely the notion of the "community" as an administrative-territorial entity of the basic level comprising one or more population centres including lands outside the boundaries thereof.

As it is known, the matters pertaining to the administrative-territorial system in Ukraine are governed so far by the Procedure approved as far back as in 1981 by a Decree of the Presidium of the Verkhovna Rada of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic. That document is not in line with the applicable Constitution of Ukraine.
